

Let's Get Lit

DESIGNERS RYAN KORBAN AND DANIELLE COLDING TALK CHANDELIERS AT DDC'S MANHATTAN SHOWROOM.

INTERVIEW BY CHARLES CURKIN

Paola Lenti's Loto screen in DDC's showroom on Madison Avenue.

RYAN KORBAN

has created retail spaces for Alexander Wang and Altuzarra and is working on his first New York City luxury condominium project, 40 Bleecker.

DANIELLE COLDING

is a New York-based interior designer and former host of Shop This Room on HGTV.

WRIGHT ROUND
BY IAN K. FOWLER

48" dia. x 26"-96" h.;
$3,221. rh.com

For more of ED's picks, see pages 50 and 51.

Are chandeliers the first thing you pick for a room or the finishing touch?

RYAN KORBAN: It's always the first thing I consider. The deciding factors are the style direction you want to go in and how much attention you want to bring to lighting as a statement. I remember this one project I did that had a double staircase. It seemed obvious that the space needed a chandelier! But then I took it out because it was too expected. If you had an apartment that looked very French with beautiful original moldings, it's nice to complete the look with a chandelier. DANIELLE COLDING: As the furniture plans evolve and you figure out the functionality of the space, that's when the chandelier can ▷